

TRAILING MEN "HIGHER UP" IN AUDIT SLAYING

GOTHAM PROSECUTOR NOW ON THE TRAIL OF THE "MEN HIGHER UP"

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—The "Men Higher Up" in the Goetz slaying from which police officials are accused of having $25,000 a year in blackmail for protection, are to day facing certain exposure and prosecution, as one of the sequel of the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

"Before a week ends there will be a lot of big people involved in this Rosenthal murder and the gambling graft revelations. You will have forgotten that I ever played a part in it at all."

Attorney James M. Sullivan, No. 38 Park road, continued his "Men Higher Up" when he arranged with District Attorney Whitman for the conference on which the tenement Charles A. Becker was indicted for murder and liquor sale in the tenement made that statement today.

"The slaying of 'Frank' (Goetz) crossed the Rosenthal murder aspect was shattered today when he was taken before three Grand Jury witnesses who identified him as the man who had sent the killing order to the three Metropoles after Herman Rosenthal was shot to death."

After the Big Men.

In the talk of the law so far have come only the small fry in the gambling world. But District Attorney Whitman knows the names of the top power-men who have been little suspected of connection with the slaying. He will only bring them out before the Grand Jury in three days. He will indicate that he is in control.

Becker was taken before the Grand Jury today. He will indicate that he is in control. The slaying of the three Metropoles after Herman Rosenthal was shot to death. The slaying of the three Metropoles after Herman Rosenthal was shot to death.

Their Nerve Failed.

Now, Whelan and Sullivan had only a story which had never been linked at the time when the murder was attempted.

Reading Between the Bargains

it is not difficult to discover that there must be a REASON for these hundreds of Bargain Lots.

There is a reason—the fact that the Automatic Bargain Basement has a system—so regulated that unless every lot is a bargain heavy losses result.

DO YOU KNOW THIS SYSTEM OF AUTOMATIC REDUCTIONS? THIS IS HOW IT WORKS:

TAKE THESE WAISTS AT $1.00 FOR EXAMPLE: They will go on sale August 2nd. If they do not sell quickly On August 16th—they will be automatically reduced to 75c.

On August 23rd—they will be reduced to 60c. On August 30th—they will be reduced to 25c. On Sept. 7th—they will be given away.

was made to kill Herman Rosenthal while he sat at dinner with his wife in the Casino restaurant at Seven Avenue and Fifth street, but they lost their nerve and one of the group with a revolver in his hand saw a man following them.

He told him that the job had failed. Becker, who was in the room, told him that the job had failed. Becker, who was in the room, told him that the job had failed.

Becker said today that the cash that he had in his pocket was $25,000. He said that he had in his pocket was $25,000. He said that he had in his pocket was $25,000.

Expect Becker to Confess.

After Sullivan predicts that Becker will break down and tell everything. He declared that Becker's present situation is popularly that he has been deceived that his main chance to escape the electric chair lies in following the pathway laid out by him.

As to the number of places that have been running under police protection, it is pointed out that corroboration can be found in the collection made by Police Lieutenant Daniel Connelley before the Grand Jury last week. Connelley has declared in an affidavit made at police headquarters that he has been deceived that his main chance to escape the electric chair lies in following the pathway laid out by him.

Concerning Becker, Beis said:

"I know that man Becker through and through. He is a big bully, but after all, reward him, let him go, let him live. If they will only keep him in the Tenement long enough he will speak."

Christie MacDonald Buys $500 Coffin for Her Pet Cat

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Christie MacDonald, the actress, came to New York with all but a broken heart. Her favorite cat, named "Prow," had died. She was looking for a coffin for him.

Everybody who knows the fascinating actress also knows "Prow." He has traveled with her for the last twelve years, even when she has been a star. He was a small but beautiful animal.

"On Monday" "Prow" died of Miss MacDonald's house in Thousand Islands. It is said that she spent $500 for the coffin. The funeral will take place on her island in the St. Lawrence.

"Prow" was about fourteen years old. Miss MacDonald had never made a journey without him since he was brought to her. At his death seemed irremediable, but it is believed she will finally live it down.

Miss MacDonald told the cat while she was appearing in Boston some seven years ago and, with her cat, called at the newspaper office at midnight to get it in a box and found it. She spent two anxious days before the cat was found and returned.

FINE DRUNKEN MOTORIST $100

James E. Costello, of No. 31 Merrim street, Newmarket, was fined $100 in the Westchester court before Judge J. A. Allen, yesterday, on a charge of operating an automobile while intoxicated. The judge asked the prosecutor and said there should be taken to have his license revoked. A charge of drunkenness against Costello was placed on file.

Costello, who is chauffeur for A. M. Farbridge of Newmarket, lost control of his car on the corner from Peter Parley road into Washington street yesterday. The car was crashed into an upright of the newspaper, Mrs. Barbara Melanson, of 42 Eighth street, and Miss Celia Murphy, of 44 Eighth street, both of whom were thrown in the sidewalk and slightly injured. Police officers testified Costello was so intoxicated that he could hardly stand.

Gigantic Harbor Swindle Charged Investors Hunting Promoter Hodson

JOHN H. HODSON AND PICTURE SHOWING WHAT HE PLANNED FOR HARBOR.

Bostonians Seek to Extradite Man Who Organized Docks and Warehouse Company.

and the loss, if any, would be heavy to any of the stockholders. The company has been reorganized three times. It received its first charter last time was on July 12, 1912, when it took the name of the Boston Dock and Warehouse Company.

Hodson issued a large number of shares of $1000 a share for his own use. He was also a director of the company.

Hodson called a meeting, voted out the directors and elected himself president and treasurer. Mr. Timmer was chosen clerk and George W. Reed, a Boston man, was made president.

Big Harbor Project.

Hodson's project for the improvement of the water front in South Boston was a swindle. It was planned to erect huge piers and warehouses which would be used to store the goods of the New Haven freight yards. Blueprints showing the scheme had been completed by engineers and every detail of the proposed work was completed.

The scheme was presented to the Legislature of 1911 and to the Harbor and Land Commissioners under the name of the Harbor Docking Trust. At that time Hodson promised to secure $25,000,000 worth of French and Belgian capital.

The enterprise was so promising that it was given a hearing in the Senate. It was then that the company was found to be a swindle.

Neighbors Beat John D. in Deal

NEW BEDFORD, Aug. 1.—The striking waters today are awaiting a reply from the manufacturers to a communication sent them seeking a conference.

The Textile Council met and discussed ways and means of making the strike more effective. It was decided that the council was trying to get the "parties" together to consider plans. One of the delegates said:

"The Textile Council believes that it is better to take place without, our friends."

The work of the relief committee was discussed. It was decided that each union should investigate its own area and report at a meeting of a subcommittee to be held tomorrow afternoon.

CALL ARCHBALD ANSWERS FALSE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The Senate on again today a court of impeachment in the case of Judge Robert W. Archbald of the commerce court. The Senate managers estimated the charge that the judge has been guilty of "high crimes and misdemeanors" and conduct unworthy of a judge, in the following resolution to the answer of Judge Archbald which was filed July 29.

"The House of Representatives of the United States of America having considered the several answers of Robert W. Archbald, additional chief judge of the United States from the Third Judicial Circuit and designated as judge of the United States Commerce Court, to the several articles of impeachment against him, do say:

"1. That the said articles in so far as they set forth impeachable offenses, high crimes and misdemeanors, as defined in the Constitution of the United States, and that the same are proper to be answered by the said Robert W. Archbald, do hereby say that the said Robert W. Archbald is guilty of the said high crimes and misdemeanors charged in said articles and that he is unworthy of the office of judge of the United States Commerce Court and is unfit to hold said office."

"2. That the said House of Representatives of the United States of America do hereby say that the said Robert W. T. R. PARTY TO BE 'NEW WHITE'

OSTER RAY Aug. 1.—Colonel Roosevelt gave a hint today of the manner in which he is to handle the negro question in the South in the formation of his new party. The president made to the South the following declaration: "I am not a 'Lily White' organization."

The Colonel is utterly opposed to the 'Lily White' system of negro representation in the South. He has the conviction that the Republican convention on Saturday, the President indicated today that his statement he will come out for a party in the South shore of the negro question. It essentially will be a 'Lily White' organization.

WILSON PLANS FOR CAMPAIGN

REAGUT, N. J. Aug. 1.—Two major conferences relating to his campaign for the presidency were held today by Governor Wilson. The first was with Mr.

NEED HEARING BEGUN BY BOARD

The hearings before the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration on the statement of the strikers of the Boston Elevated Railway began this afternoon at the State House. It was provided by a conference that lasted from 11 until 11 o'clock by the members of the board, James H. Vahry and Fred Van, representing the strikers, and F. E. Shaw for the Elevated.

Herbert Parker, retained as counsel for the strikers, the old employee who did not strike—appeared at the State House at 11:30. He went to his car, but was not admitted. Mr. Parker said he was told the hearing was not admitted as he was not a conference was not held.

"I have petitioned the board for a hearing," said Mr. Parker. "If this is granted, I shall be naturally bound by the decision of the board."

"What will you do if you are not admitted?"

"I should be inclined to strike with the men as would morally and legally protect our interests."

"I would not say that, because it would be in the nature of a threat."

When the conference over Mr. Wood of the board was asked if Mr. Parker would be admitted at the hearing which he was decided would begin at 1 o'clock.

"The board has not decided," he replied. "The article of the agreement that provides for the action of the State board is as follows:

"The State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration to determine what steps shall be taken for the time within which and the rating at which they shall be taken."

The union has passed a vote meeting tomorrow evening at the American, at which the strikers will be asked to strike. The strikers will be asked to strike. The strikers will be asked to strike.

"Loafs" to Aid Russell Case Woman's Work Is Too Noisy

MRS. BRADBURY, COURTHOUSE EMPLOYEE.

JEANETTE C. BRADBURY

Running Binding Machinery Under Courtroom Disturbances Famous Identity Case.

A book binder and the Russell will one are currently linked these days, and a pretty young woman is an inmate of the East Cambridge court group.

The combination is not voluntary. Although it proves anything at times, like the proverbial "oil wind," it has its human influences in that it gives Mrs. Jeanette C. Bradbury, resident of her father's home, the Russell, a reputation for being a racket at times that it is necessary to knock off until noon or adjournment in order not to interfere with the court proceedings.

That is where Mrs. Bradbury is both a worker and a loafer. While it gives her work here at the court, it gives her a whole day's work at the Russell. Sometimes Mrs. Bradbury only ventures as far as the threshold, where she tries to see and later on the shoulders of the standing late arrivals. At other times she takes a seat in the "backroom," as the chairs in the jury panels have come to be called, just as the regular workers are known as "court girls."

NEW CLASH IN RUSSELL CASE

A spirited clash is expected when the Russell will hearing is resumed tomorrow in the East Cambridge court. Attorney Robert W. Nixon, representing the estate, charged that Attorney William R. Schaefer, for Dakota Dan, is using his case as a "rough end" to putting William C. Russell on the stand for the purpose, he claims, of "showing" Dakota Dan as a man who takes the stand later he will know just what to say.

Master Gilbert A. Perry is considering the objection of Attorney Nixon today and will give his answer tomorrow. Mr. Nixon has threatened, if Master Perry decides against him, to take the matter to the Supreme Court.

The trouble was precipitated when William C. Russell, brother of the deceased Daniel Blake Russell, was put on the stand and Attorney Schaefer began questioning him. It is a very quiet tone, in marked contrast to his method with former witnesses. Schaefer had begun to ask Mr. Russell about his recognition of Frank Dan as his brother. At almost every question Attorney Nixon interposed his by this time very familiar objection, "May it please your Honor, I object."

In most cases Master Perry overruled his objection. Mr. Russell to say: "I did not recognize Frank Dan the first time I saw him, but thought he must either be my brother or a carefully constructed double."

"Did Mr. Dan help you to decide he was your brother?" asked Schaefer. "Certainly, yes," came the reply. "Well, what further did you need to satisfy you?" came back Schaefer.

Hardly were the words out of his lips, however, before Nixon was on his feet with his "May it please Your Honor, I object." He then continued:

"I move, Your Honor, that this evidence be excluded and that Mr. Schaefer be prevented from proceeding along his present line of inquiry. I do this because I claim that it is not time for this witness to testify, and that Mr. Schaefer's inquiry is immaterial and irrelevant."

"It is merely an attempt on the part of the other side to add Mr. Nixon, to add into Dakota Dan so that he may know all the facts before he is called to the stand. It is merely an attempt to add Mr. Nixon, to add into Dakota Dan so that he may know all the facts before he is called to the stand. It is merely an attempt to add Mr. Nixon, to add into Dakota Dan so that he may know all the facts before he is called to the stand."

The Shrinking Skirt BY MORTON BIRGE.

The person who is worried by the women's clinging skirt. Who says it is immodest, over-tight and all too short. Is due to get his feelings and his eye-sight still more hurt. According to the latest from the highest fashion court.

Dispatches from Paris say the one best fashion bet is that the short and scanty skirt, which causes all the talk. Instead of growing longer, will become some shorter yet. And also be as scanty as will let the wearer walk.

The man who, therefore, fumes over the style they wear today. Who shrinks for fuller pattern and a hem down to the floor. Would better get him ready, in a month or two he may see lighter, shorter skirting than he ever saw before.

RED SOX RILEY'S COLUMN BIRMINGHAM

IF Johnny Kling had not made the old mistake of "driving a good horse to death," his hand of Pittsburgh in the playing better baseball every day of their lives, would like to be the longest baseball game in the major leagues this season, or, failing that, would have prolonged the opening struggle with the Pirates into a war with the longest National League game on record, and possibly would have been the best National and perhaps the American League record for long ball games.

KLING's error of judgment occurred when he revealed Otto Hess from the clubhouse to pitch the nineteenth year of yesterday's game between the Pirates and Pittsburgh, and he was criticized by "fans" today for taking the chance. Hess had pitched a superb game but had fought off two pitchers and was facing a third when he was forced to go along, although he was obviously "played out."

TO begin with, Hess outpitched Marty O'Rourke, the $22,000 beauty, and would have won the game in nine innings but for "Honus" Wagner's work in squeezing through a run in the seventh. This remarkable game in which the Pirates and Pittsburgh fought two and one in favor of Boston when the seventh inning opened. Wagner hit O'Rourke, whose throw drew Devin off first for as instant. When he touched the bag again Wagner had crossed, according to the ruling of Umpire Eason, although it was a close decision.

WAGNER went to second on Miller's sacrifice, and stole third. Wilson, in the meantime, went to first on Miller's sacrifice. One error of judgment occurred here. He is lefthanded and his back was towards the home base as he failed to detect a signal for a double steal and saw Wagner's lead off first. He threw to Devin and the pinch-hit "Honus" caught his lead off the plate. Joe beating Devin's throw and being confined with a twisted knee. That was the end.

FROM that time until the eighteenth inning neither side scored, and up to that time the Pirates had led by six runs. Hess, who was giving one of

NEW POLICY FOR PILGRIM TEAM

Boston fans are today wondering just what new line is in store for the Boston National baseball team, now that Treasurer James H. Gaffney has acquired the stock of President John M. Ward. Changes in the policy of the club and perhaps in the makeup of the team are expected by those who have been following the situation.

The Pilgrims have undergone many changes in ownership since the days when they were winning championships and Messers. Conant, Soden and others were directing the club. For a while they were the losers, while John Henry was in control. Then they were known as the "Hops," when William Hodgson Russell and L. Conner Page directed their destinies.

The death of Mr. Russell resulted in the team coming into the control of the New York club, which started them on their career this year.

Now comes another change and the fans are eager to see just what it will bring about.

Directors Meet Tomorrow. Gaffney is expected in Boston today to call a meeting of the directors to discuss this new phase in the career of the Pilgrims.

At this meeting a number of points in connection with the team's withdrawal are expected to be brought forward. Ward's withdrawal is limited to the result of friction with the directors, but the latter, in his statement, declared that "I do not wish to discuss the matter of my resignation."

Ward was generally considered as being responsible for the waste of money which has been a few weeks ago when he was on the players, bandages and liniments and other supplies and expenses were denied the team. These things, however, were afterward given the team after being denied for some days.

Ward Exits Attitude. The question of trades for players and purchases and releases of others is also expected to have entered into the situation.

Ward was blamed for many of the club's losses in last place. His statement, issued from New York, is as follows: "I sold my stock in the Boston club to Treasurer James H. Gaffney of New York, and that's the end of it. I am not in the least interested in the stock of the club, but I am interested in the club itself, and I am interested in the club's success. I am interested in the club's success, and I am interested in the club's success."

SOX OUT FOR ALL IN SIGHT

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 1.—The Red Sox provide a well-deserved lesson in respect to the leadership in the tight pennant scrap, the athletes of St. Louis are playing a careful and deliberate game, and this is the reason Manager Stahl gives for bringing his club out in front.

The loss of the Red Sox does not expect to lose any ground out in the West, but instead is confident that he will return home with a larger lead than when he departed. In this city the eastern crowd should have little trouble gaining on its rivals, the Senators and Athletics.

The first game was a struggle in brilliant style, Holbert pitching a splendid game. He almost put over a shutout, but lost it when Shorten got a single that scored Hogan when there were two out.

Just the same, the Browns practically presented the contest to the eastern. Shorten used a young college boy on the hill. He was Adams, and he would have given extra innings but for a rank mob by the fans.

In the sixth, with two on and two out, Corbitt showed little left, John, however, was rapped under the ball, waiting for it to stop, but turned in a rank error. One run came in, breaking the tie score, and then Pitcher Holbert surprised himself by smothering out a hit that added two more.

The reports that waited around in the West that the Red Sox are ready to crack after this terrific race, are without foundation. All the boys are in perfect physical condition, and the pitchers are in great shape. It really was Woods' turn to open the game, but he was not in the mood for working overtime and Stahl decided to give Joe Wood his day.

A local paper prints a big story today, saying that the pitcher who holds the club to the finish will win the pennant for his club. A lengthy table gives Wood a record of twenty victories and four defeats, with Johnson winning twenty-two and losing twenty. The table of hits and runs also gives the Red Sox an advantage over the eastern clubs.

Baseball House First.
The first building to go up is the baseball house, the first building devoted to baseball to be built by any college, the committee believes. It is hoped that this building will be constructed by November 15, so the College Athletic Stars will hold football practice in it when the weather outdoors is unattractive. It is planned also to hold night signal drills in football.

The baseball building will be a steel-shed structure of steel trusses and corrugated metal siding, with a flat roof, a clear playing space of 10,000 square feet. Screens will be arranged so that the structure will be open to the wind, and along the road, and at the same time the lightning and natural soil will give the effect of an open-air stadium.

If it, of course, planned that building practice next year will be held in this building instead of in the crowded grounds of the University of California.

The building will be a perfect place for the candidates for the track team and for minor athletic teams space room for practice, and a place for the students to sit the second of the six levels into which the big track has been graded, and is close to the new stadium.

Training House Buildings

The sound of the buildings that will be erected, the training house, will house all the members of the athletic teams who may be in training at any time. The house will provide living quarters, studies, and a place for the students to sit.

The completion of the whole Alumni Field project depends on the amount of money collected from the alumni. Eventually the university is expected to build a gymnasium on the tract, and when this is completed the full project will have to involved the expenditure of about a million dollars.

The Man Who Posed as Jesus and as Judas.

Leonardo Da Vinci painted his "Last Supper" on the rear wall of a church in Milan. Napoleon stabled his horses in the church. The horses kicked away much of the painting.

People from all lands visit the old church each year, and as they study the beautiful faces, now grown dim, they moralize about Napoleon, about Da Vinci's peasant mother, about time's ravages and other things.

They might well moralize over the story of Da Vinci's great model—if they knew it.

Here is the story; it applies to every human being. You can make it of use to yourself without going to the church in Milan.

The artist sought to express the widest possible range of character study in his great painting. Laboriously, during many years, he sought and sketched types of men.

The eleven good disciples were first painted, and then Da Vinci began eagerly seeking for a face worthy to serve as a foundation for his inspired portrait of Christ.

He found a face that pleased him at last. It was that of a young man singing in the Milan Cathedral.

It was a beautiful face, breathing a spirit of truth and of lofty idealism. The young man gladly accepted the honor offered him, and posed for the face that today looks out so calm and gentle among the twelve disciples.

Only one face then remained to be painted—that of Judas, the traitor.

Throughout the jails and through haunts of crime Da Vinci sought a face that should embody the hideous depravity, the utter baseness of a spirit that could betray the gentlest of men.

He found his model at last, in a prison cell in Rome. The face was not that of an old man. But vice, evil thoughts, evil living gave it the stamp of sunken humanity which the painter sought.

That face was painted as the face of Judas—and after the work was done Da Vinci learned, through an accident, that the young man who had posed for the face of Jesus was the same as he in the prison cell who had posed for the face of Judas.

A few years of evil living had done the work. Such a change had been made in those few years that the painter himself, familiar through long work with the model's face, failed utterly to recognize it.

This story is often heard with incredulity. But why should it be heard with incredulity?

Can you recognize a stream of pure spring water after it has run through the gutter of a city?

Can you believe that the face twitching under the black mask as the hangman mounts the scaffold was once the face of a pretty young child, loved by its mother and seeming in every man's eyes the embodiment of permanent innocence?

Each city magistrate, when he climbs to his police court seat, sees a row of unhappy women before him. They vary in age from twenty to sixty. Listlessly he sentences these women—sometimes for drunkenness, sometimes for "crimes" in which the responsible criminal goes free. Would one of these miserable women be recognized by those who knew her when her face reflected a pure mind? Not one, except, perhaps, some mother whose eyes see through all the marks of a hard world and into the soul that cannot be destroyed.

Have you ever seen a photograph of yourself made when you were a child?

You have laughed at the old picture, probably, at the old-fashioned clothing, the "best suit" with the wide black braid, or the funny old dress.

Look again at the picture of your childhood, and look seriously. You will be a fortunate man or woman if you can look and not miss anything.

Look carefully at the eyes and the mouth. Study the expression. Do you find none of the frankness, freshness, truth or other good qualities missing?

The woman who has devoted her life to pleasure, to dismal social vanity, to eager pursuit of worthless excitement, looks bitterly in her glass as the years go by. The peace has gone, the youth has been replaced not by calm, self-respecting age, but by bitter regret that stains all the expression, deadens the eyes and makes the face look out at its owner as different from the girl of ten or fifteen years ago as is the face of Judas from that of Jesus in the great picture of Milan.

The moral in the story of Leonardo's model does not apply to extreme cases alone.

It applies to the middle-aged man made hard—hard inside and out by persistent, selfish hunting for money.

It applies to the gourmet or gourmand who has devoted his intelligence exclusively to the service of his stomach.

It applies to the newspaper man who thinks that "journalism makes men pessimistic," but who ought to know that lack of sincere interest in other men is what "makes men pessimistic."

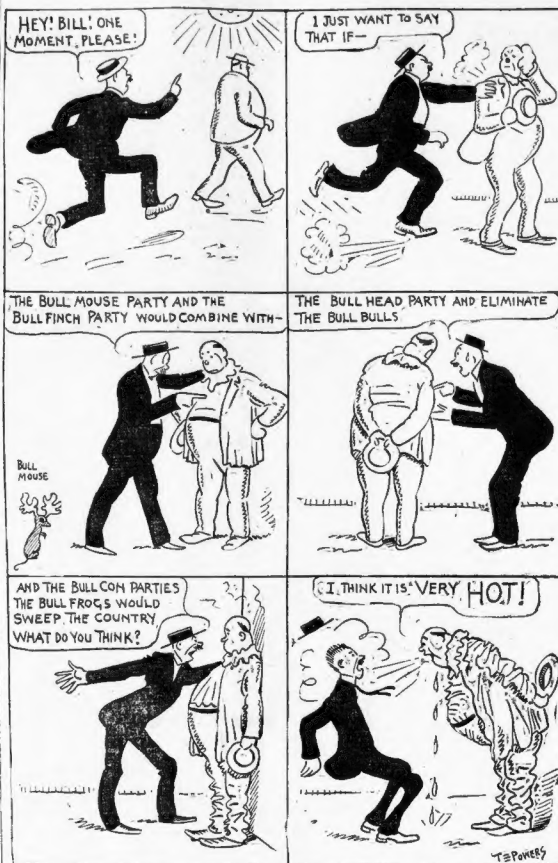

When your life is ended, so far as material accomplishment goes, you may have money, you may have fame, you may be envied by others. But for yourself you will only have ONE possession really important—your opinion of yourself, based on your knowledge of what you have really aimed at and really done.

Your face will tell the story of your life at its various phases. It will tell the whole story toward the end, as you look in the glass and see in every line and in the whole expression whether you have been true or false to the start and the possibilities that nature gave you.

"William, I can't pay any attention to you and Theodore this morning. I'm so upset over this cartoon that somebody has sent me! Did you ever see anything so insulting? It makes me nervous, too! You can't tell what minute I may be locked up for felony! Supposing Root should confess!"

ANYONE who promises much for little gets the attention of the crowd.

The reason why we pay promoters of fake investment schemes a million dollars a day is because we expect two millions, or more, in return, tomorrow or the day after.

One of the oldest games in the world is to catch a man and his money by promising him something he wants. And it farther away the gold mine is, the richer he feels until he finds out, later on, how far, far away the promoter is who took the money.

It is just as easy to lunge a man out of his common sense as it is out of his money. And a bad phase of this trick is, that while a man who loses his money always misses it and knows he has lost it, he can be robbed of his reason and never suspect it.

This is why a man should be everlastingly asking questions, not only about what he does not understand, but also about what he feels sure of. It is so easy to dream that some dream looks like the real thing.

All this leads up to the silver-tongued spellbinder who tells you how well off you can be by taking his view in politics. He is generally an interesting man, and that he can make voters follow him like sheep trotting after a shepherd shows that he is a man who knows how to sell his goods.

These men always talk about Prosperity, because they know that every human being is interested in it. It is the one thing all people want. No matter what a man has, he wants more. Hence, the shepherd and the sheep.

Lots of men, thousands of them, will tell you exactly how the affairs of this nation should be run to bring prosperity to all. And yet these men are themselves not always prosperous.

The rules that slip off their silver tongues seem not to work in their own cases.

Do you imagine that the framers of the Constitution who added their names after that of George Washington winked at "some other" when they introduced such expressions as "justice," "domestic tranquility" and "liberties of liberty" into that document?

They did not.

They had in mind the sublime fact that a citizen has powers for ambition, industry, and prosperity conferred upon him by the Creator; while rights and privileges for their development were conferred upon him by the Constitution of the United States. All these work together for the glory of the man if he has any pride in them.

Let us imagine the case of the average voter to be something like this:

He has a family and a job. He gets money for his labor, and he spends this money. He moves through life year after year, his wife by his side and his children about him. He makes some sort of a home, and acquires some kind of a reputation among his friends.

This man wants prosperity, for every man does. He wants it not for himself alone, but for his family.

How is he to get it? There are two ways. The first is lovely, rosy, and inactive. The second is sure to work every time, though it does not look as rosy as the first.

The first way is to work when you feel like it, let things at home run along any way they may, save nothing, do little to make a proud and happy family—meanwhile, wait until we have a decent government and every MAN gets a square deal.

The second way is to work to the limit of endurance all the time, to stick to the job, until a better one can be had; to take pride in the home, to make wife and children feel that the affairs of their little home-republic are absolutely safe in your hands.

With this, a little frugality and good management, which means something set aside for the rainy day. And what is the result?

You may answer:

A man who has found prosperity.

This is only half right. The real answer is this:

A nation that has found and possesses a citizen who contributes prosperity to it as a whole.

A republic is made up of units.

When everyone is interested in testing himself against the spellbinder that wants him to invest his intelligence in fraudulent principle, the whole matter of national prosperity takes care of itself.

They do not make prosperity in Washington, D. C., nor at the national convention of the two great parties. They may promise it. But so far as you get it, you make it for yourself.

Your family is a republic, and you are president of it. Keep that picture in mind. Your term of office is lifelong. Serve it with all the efficiency you possess and you will have done more, in the end, to make prosperity a real thing than if you had followed the political shepherds all your life. Bleating at their heels like a helpless lamb for a little odd change to send home to wife and children.

MAINE, New Hampshire and Massachusetts have had their turn at editing the Boston Sunday AMERICAN through the mediumship of their Governors. Next Sunday Rhode Island has its innings, for Governor Aram J. Pothier of Rhode Island will be the editor of next Sunday's AMERICAN. And Everybody in New England will be just as much interested as will be the people of Rhode Island.

Governor Plaisted, while representing Maine in the editorial chair, kept the needs of New England as a whole in mind. So did Governor Bass of New Hampshire. So did Governor Foss of Massachusetts. So will Governor Pothier of Rhode Island.

Better order your Sunday AMERICAN today, and at the same time tell him that you want the Sunday AMERICAN of August 11, when Governor John A. Mead of Vermont will be the editor.
